

TATTOOING REVEALS IDENTITY OF DEAD BRIDGE CARPENTER

Lloyd Phelps Came of Wealthy
Family in the East.

REMAINS WILL BE SHIPPED
BACK TO PEOPLE IN MICHIGAN

Lloyd Phelps, the bridge carpenter who died at St. Joseph's hospital from a fractured skull received as the result of a fearful fall from a bridge on the Zuni mountain railway, has been identified as the son of L. M. Phelps, a wealthy resident of Pontiac, Michigan. The identification was made by means of curiously tattooed marks on the arms of the dead bridge worker, whose parentage and residence were considerable of a mystery to the local authorities.

On Phelps' left forearm, tattooed into the flesh indelibly with a needle, is a dagger and on the right forearm was discovered the figure of a woman, artistically executed in ink with fine lines that betrayed the touch of an artist.

In reply to queries sent to Pontiac, Mich., O. W. Strong's Sons yesterday morning received a message from L. M. Phelps, which said:

"Body cannot possibly be that of my son, as he is now living in Cedar Rapids, Iowa."

The message further said that on the arms of Mr. Phelps' son were tattooed a dagger and a woman. This at once showed that the father was mistaken about his son being in Cedar Rapids and that the luckless man who died of a fractured skull is indeed the son of L. M. Phelps. The news was immediately telegraphed back to Pontiac, and the body will be sent there for interment. Strong's Sons will ship the remains this evening.

Phelps' history has evidently been an unusual one. His parents are said to be persons of considerable wealth, and the theory is that the young man, who has been roving over the country doing odd jobs, had some kind of trouble with the family, and struck out for the west.

TOM AND ELLE BACK FROM THE WILDS OF THE NAVAJO LAND

Tom and Elle, the Navajos, who have made Fred Harvey famous, have returned to their blanket weaving at the local curio rooms after a long visit on the reservation, during which time Tom was cured by the tribal medicine men of his rheumatism, and Elle got enough fresh air and sunshine to make her look like a youthful Indian maiden instead of a somewhat middle-aged squaw who can weave blankets just a little bit better than any other Indian woman in the southwest.

Tom and Elle both look as if the reservation agreed with them, but seemed glad to get back in the blankets, embowered in the comfort of the curio rooms and resume their old occupation of exhibiting the admiring wonderment of the festive tenderfoot and the ubiquitous tourist.

The Navajos have been gone from Albuquerque for the past six months, though Tom had a glimpse of Manager Schweitzer not long ago when the curio expert made a little trip out on the reservation.

That meeting was a dramatic one. Tom was sitting in a little old hogan away out in the wilderness at the foot of a mountain, surrounded by a crowd of braves helping celebrate his emancipation from the rheumatism. Mr. Schweitzer, quietly walked in the door and said, "Hello, Tom." The eyes of the redoubtable Tom, who did not know Mr. Schweitzer, were within two hundred miles, stuck out so the curio man might have thought they would iron Tom and Elle are probably the most widely advertised Indians in the country, as their fame has spread abroad through the medium of several hundred thousand Santa Fe and Harvey's soldiers scattered all over the United States. Incidentally Albuquerque gets advertised in a way that falls to the lot of few towns of its size in the broad land.

Tom and Elle will remain at the local curio rooms permanently now, or until the "wander-lust" calls them again to the reservation.

WIFE AND SON TOO LATE TO REACH BEDSIDE OF LATE C. N. BOND

The Chicago Record-Herald of Wednesday last contains a large photograph and obituary notice of the late Charles N. Bond, whose wife and son, Charles N. Bond, Jr., of the Santa Fe storekeeper's office here, left several days ago for Chicago upon receiving news of his serious illness. The wife and son arrived too late to see Mr. Bond alive, as the city and state suddenly following an operation at the end of only a week's sickness.

Mr. Bond, Sr., had been a resident of Chicago since 1862, being one of the oldest living residents of the city. He was in the printing business for most of his life and managed numerous large job printing establishments in Chicago. He was born in Niles, Michigan, and removed to the Windy city when 19 years old.

Besides his wife and C. N. Bond, Jr., of this city, the deceased is survived by another son who resides in San Jose, California, and a daughter, Miss Clara Bond, of New York. The latter was with him at the time of his death.

Charles N. Bond, of this city, will return accompanied by his mother in a few days to resume his position in the Santa Fe office. He and Mrs. Bond have many friends in Albuquerque who will greatly regret to hear of their bereavement.

BROTHER OF DEAD BOILERMAKER LOCATED

PHILADELPHIA POLICE FIND
JAMES MURPHY AFTER SEARCH

Deceased Was Professional Strike-breaker and at One Time Was Pinkerton Man.

Undertaker Borders yesterday received a telegram from John H. Taylor, chief of police of Philadelphia, and James J. Murphy, of 2666 North Chadwick street of the same city, in regard to John Murphy, the Santa Fe boilermaker who met death Friday morning early, by falling down stairs at the Green hotel at Third street and Atlantic avenue in this city.

James J. Murphy is a brother of the deceased and was located only after a most thorough search by the police of Philadelphia.

It is very probable that the body will be sent to the brother for interment, though explicit instructions have not yet been received.

From what can be learned it seems that the dead man has been quite a traveler and wrote but few letters. He had been away from home for several years and therefore the police of Philadelphia had considerable trouble in locating anyone who knew him. For some time past he had been engaged in the strike breaking business and in said to have been a member of the Pinkerton detective agency.

FIGHT ON SOCIAL EVIL WILL BE DETERMINED

PETITION TO BE CIRCULATED
THOROUGHLY IN THE CITY

The organization of citizens formed Saturday night in the office of A. B. McMillen, to press the fight on public vice in Albuquerque, is going about the matter in a business like and determined way and will undoubtedly accomplish definite and satisfactory results quickly. Copies of the petition that will be presented to the city council tonight were yesterday displayed at the various churches and extensively signed, and the pastors called attention to the matter from the pulpits last night.

Nothing but commendation of the action of the men who started the movement has been heard on all sides, and it is expected that the petition to the council tonight will be a monster one. To secure additional signatures President A. B. McMillen, of the organization, yesterday handed the Morning Journal the following communication, accompanied by the form of the petition which is to be tendered to the council:

To the People of Albuquerque: Over five hundred invitations were sent out from the Driscoll place on North Third street to the men and boys of Albuquerque. Are the fathers and mothers and wives interested? If so, what shall the answer be?

At a meeting of citizens held Saturday night a committee was appointed to address the city council orally and also to present a petition from the people of which a copy is given below.

Do you approve the answer? A number of such petitions are being circulated, but it will be impossible to reach more than a small portion of the people in that way.

If you approve the proposed petition and have not already signed one, you and your friends can sign the petition printed below and send to the undersigned. All petitions received will be presented to the city council by the committee. Respectfully,
A. B. McMILLEN,
Chairman.

The Stein-Bloch Wool Test

MERCERIZED COTTON

ABSOLUTELY ALL WOOL

The Stein-Bloch Wool Test consists of a boiling solution of water and caustic potash, the chemical action of which dissolves wool but not cotton. The two samples here shown were originally of the same length, the test proved one to be all wool, consuming the part immersed and leaving only the blackened edge. The other proved to be an adulteration containing a large per cent of mercerized cotton.
